A PEN-PICTURE OF THE GREAT STATESMAN. A writer in Blackwood's Magazine thus describes Prince Bismarck: He is a powerful man. That is what strikes at once every one who sees him for health had been failing for several years, the first time. He is very tall and of enormous weight, but not ungainly. Every part | very rapidly. He was for several years one of his gigantic frame is well proportionedthe large, round head, the massive neck, the the First National), which position he left to bread shoulders, and the vigorous limbs. He is now more than sixty-three, and the chiefly of this city. He was a gallant solburden he has had to bear has been unusually heavy; but though his step has become slow and ponderous, he carries his head high—looking down even on those who severely wounded in the battle of Cedar are as tall as himself-and his figure is still erect. During these latter years he has suf- fered, and which it is believed greatly confered frequent and severe bodily pain, but no one could look upon him as an old man or as one to be pitied. On the contrary, everybody who sees him feels that Prince houses of this city, and in this capacity Bismarck is still in possession of immease physical power. Photography has made his ant trusts, all of which he faithfully disfeatures known to all. It is a strange face, which would attract attention anywhere, even if we did not know that it belonged to a man whose doings have changed our The pall-bearers are to be J. B. Purcell modern world. It is a face never to be forgotten-by no means a handsome but Thomas A. Brander, Adolphus Blair, Wilstill less an ugly one. It was remarkably bright, full of humor-of merry mischief even-in days long gone by. It has now become serious-almost solemn-with an expression of unflinching energy and daring. The bald, round fore-head-an object of admiration for the phrenologist -- is of quite extraordinary dimensions; the large, prominent blue eyes seem as if they could look into the sun without blinking. They are not quick-they wander slowly from one object to another; but when they rest on a human countenance they become so intensely inquiring that many people, when they have to undergo this searching look, feel uneasy; and all, even Bismarck's equals or superiors, are made aware that they are in presence of a man with whom it would be wise to play as this company's contribution towards the conduct and fined $10. fair, as he would probably discover the sub- payment of the expenses of the North Catlest tricks. The nose is of ordinary size-not as long, perhaps, as might be expected from J. B. Winston, Esq., Treasurer Richmond, the rest of the face; the chin is large and massive. menced to improve the Capitol-Square walks by removing the upper crust of coarse gravel and supplying its place with tiner material.

[Communicated.] A Card from Captain F. V. Winston.

I desire to correct several inaccuracies in the statement of my military record made in the communication signed * Many Voters of the 6th instant.

On Jackson's Valley campaign I was left near Front Royal very sick, and was afterwards dangerously sick from returning to duty too soon, so that I did not share the fortunes of my regiment in the seven days' battles around Richmond, being able to return to duty only in time for the battle of Slaughter's Mountain and the second Manassas campaign.

In the Chancellorsville campaign my regiment was with General Early in opposing Sedgwick, and in the Gettysburg campaign we were left to garrison the post of Winchester after its capture, and did not go to Gettysburg. I did not furnish the material to the friend who wrote the sketch, and these details were very naturally not remembered with entire accuracy. I was not in Richmond and did not see the communication as prepared until it was published, and owing to the pressure of the canvass 1 did not read it carefully until the 16th instant.
